Supervisors: Associate professor Martin Bækgaard & associate professor Lene Aarøe, both Dept. of Political Science, Aarhus University

Research interests

I do research within the field of public administration. In my PhD I mainly focus on how citizens perceive the performance of public organizations and the government in general by combining classic public administration theory with theories from political psychology and behavior.

Vocational experience

Central Denmark Region, Health Department

6-month full-time internship and student worker Sep 2016-Aug 2017

Provided me with insight in the organization of healthcare in primary hospitals. I have in particular worked with administration of large building and construction projects (in relation to construction of new hospitals), administration of emergency departments across Central Denmark Region and writing statements for local politicians.
